

The many angles of Celebrate CSUB

By Roxana Chavez

CSUB, It's your University!

(Left to right) Dale Austin, Marcus Sparks, and Taeshon Lee performed drills with a parachute for conditioning skills at celebrate CSUB.

Here is an enthusiastic adorable little dancer of the group of 3-5 year olds from Pinpoint Dance Academy who performed in front of many spectators present in celebrating CSUB.

This young potter is busy at work, helping the art department in creating beautiful works of pottery during the celebration of CSUB.

Incoming freshmen Jose Chavez attended his orientation accompanied by his mother Altagracia Chavez and afterward enjoyed in the festivities of Celebrate CSUB.

The CSUB cheerleaders strike a pose before their performance at Celebrate CSUB.

(Left to right) Erika Collins, Sohna Bruce, and Danielle Mabon were more than happy to volunteer at the event Celebrate CSUB.

The children present at the event were able to celebrate the university and enjoy many of the festivities offered at Celebrate CSUB among them were the Bounce Houses.

American Medical Student Association (AMSA) set up a booth at Celebrate CSUB to offer face paintings and to inform guests about their program to the future doctors and dentists of America.

Here we see the judo and self defense club stretching before showing off their skills.

The guests of Celebrate CSUB were also able to enjoy live music, among many of the songs played Brick House was an all time favorite.

Amidst Celebrate CSUB, the parents and future Roadrunners are shown above leaving the Icardo Center where they registered for their freshmen orientation.

PG&E Solar Schools Program was present at CSUB with their large sun ovens baking cookies with natural sunlight for the guests of the event.

The multi-purpose room found inside the Student Union was full of parents and future students who were eager to be oriented about the University, CSUB.

Daniel Alexander who is a CSO (Campus Safety Officer) assists the on campus police in making sure that Celebrate CSUB was not only successful but a safe event.